“Healthful Hints” Monthly Health News Column

Disposing of Unwanted Prescriptions

20% of teens say they have taken a prescription drug without a doctor’s prescription, according to the CDC. In fact, more teens now abuse prescription drugs than any illicit drug except marijuana; more than cocaine, heroin and methamphetamine combined.

Why? Some teens mistakenly believe that prescription drugs are safer and less addictive than common street drugs. In fact, prescription drugs are only safe for the individuals who actually have prescriptions for them. They provide benefits when used correctly under a doctor’s care. It’s important to remember, however, medications are also readily available to teens in the medicine cabinet at home, and many parents may not be aware the teen is abusing the drugs.

Whether they’re using street drugs or medications, drug abusers often have trouble at school, at home, with friends, or with the law. Like all drug abuse, using prescription drugs for the wrong reasons has serious health risks. Some of these risks include heart failure, seizures, vomiting, mood changes, coma, or death. If you think you – or a friend – may be addicted to prescription drugs, talk with your parents, a doctor, school counselor, or nurse.

If you’re a parent, grandparent or caregiver, there are steps you can take make sure your teen does not have access to your prescription drugs. These tips and more information can be found online at www.notinmyhouse.drugfree.org.

- Monitor: Start by taking note of how many pills are in each of your prescription bottles. Keep track of your refills. This goes for your own medication, as well as for your teens and other members of the household. If your teen has been prescribed a drug, be sure you control the medication, and monitor dosages and refills. Make sure your friends and family – especially grandparents – are also aware of the risks. Encourage them to monitor their own medicine cabinets.
- Secure: Approach securing your prescriptions the same way you would other valuables in your home, like jewelry or cash. Take prescription drugs out of the cabinet and hide them in a place only you know about. If possible, keep all medicines, both prescription and over-the-counter, in a safe place, such as a locked cabinet you teen cannot access. Grandparents and other relatives should do the same.
- Dispose: Take an inventory of all the prescription drugs in your home. Unbelievable as it may seem, teenagers will retrieve discarded prescription drugs from the trash. Officials from across Rock County have worked tirelessly in the past few years to be able to give you many locations where you can safely dispose of unwanted, unneeded and expired drugs anytime, day or night. The locations of these Rx Drop Boxes are listed below.

Parents, grandparents and caregivers are the most important tool against prescription drug abuse. Don't let your child become the next statistic. You can prevent them from becoming one of the daily 2,500 teenagers who get high for the first time from a prescription drug.
